TRADING METHOD

The program uses a number of different options and futures strategies. The option strategies include a variety of different spreads such as verticals, calendars, ratios, strangles, and straddles amongst others. The program will also outright sell or buy an option in certain situations. In addition, the program may purchase or sell futures to offset an open option position. The program trades options and futures contracts in the crude oil, coffee, soybean, gold, natural gas and corn markets, among others. The implementation of this trading program depends on both technical and fundamental considerations. Technical analysis involves the study of charted prices, volume and momentum to determine the future course of prices. Other analysis may also be performed on the prices of various options, both in absolute terms in relation to their historic price level, and in relative terms comparing the prices of puts to the prices of similar calls. Implied and historical volatility of both the option and its underlying commodity are also studied. Fundamental considerations, utilized on a commodity by commodity basis, include supply and demand, seasonal movements as well as business and economic factors, governmental policies, weather, and other worldwide events, which can influence the commodity markets.

A secondary strategy seeks to profit from seasonal patterns inherent in various commodity markets. The trades taken may be outright long (buy) and short (sell) positions or spread trades between two similar commodities. Seasonal trading may also employ the use of buying and-or selling options.

A third strategy that HB Capital Management has developed is a proprietary program for trading the stock market. We may take a long position when a buy signal is generated for the stock market and may take a short position when a sell signal is generated.

ADVISOR, INVESTMENT, OR INFORMATION DISCLAIMER

The funds are unregistered private investment funds or pools that employ different investment, hedging, leverage and arbitrage methodologies with exposure to many different securities and futures markets. The funds are not subject to the same regulatory requirements as mutual funds, including mutual funds requirements to provide certain periodic and standardized pricing and valuation information to investors. You should note the following:

- * The funds represent speculative investments and involve a high degree of risk. An investor could lose all or a substantial portion of his or her investment.
- * Any investment in the funds should be discretionary capital set aside strictly for speculative purposes.
- * An investment in a fund is not suitable for all investors.
- * The funds can be leveraged and a fund's performance can be volatile.
- * Some funds may use a single advisor or employ a single strategy, which could mean a lack of diversification
- * Some funds may execute a substantial portion of trades on foreign exchanges, which could mean higher risk.
- * An investment in the funds may be illiquid and there are significant restrictions on transferring interests in a fund. There is no secondary market for an investor's investment in a fund and none is expected to develop.
- * A fund's fees and expenses - which may be substantial regardless of any positive return - will offset the fund's trading profits.
- * Some funds may involve complex tax structures and delays in distributing important tax information.
- * This summary is not a complete list of the risks and other important disclosures involved in investing in the funds and is subject to the more complete disclosures contained in the fund's respective offering documents, which should be reviewed carefully.
- * All performance information is believed to be Net All Fees unless otherwise specifically noted.
